

Toho Journal of Medicine: The New Official English Publication of the Medical Society of Toho University

Editor in Chief

Atsushi Sugiyama MD, PhD

We are very pleased to provide you with the Toho Journal of Medicine (Toho J Med), the new, official, English-language publication of The Medical Society of Toho University. The number of basic and clinical studies has been rapidly increasing at Toho University in recent years. However, since some of these articles are written in Japanese, their contents have not reached an international audience. These studies should benefit not only Japanese physicians and researchers but also people around the world with an interest in medical science. Our new English journal will disseminate general and specialized information and research on medical science to readers in Japan and abroad. It will be published quarterly and include original research articles, case studies, data, short communications, and review articles. It is my sincere hope that the Toho J Med will reinforce our contribution to the international advancement of medical science. We look forward to receiving a great number of interesting submissions.
